ADVO Calls It Quits After Twenty Years Of Business

ADVO, the bane of letter carriers nationwide, today announced from its headquarters in Littertown, CO, that it would cease publication effective immediately. CEO Guy Blinky said that the popular coupon-packed circular had design problems from the start. "Them dangd inserts hardly never even got to the customer's mailbox, what with the way they were always fluttering out," he said. "Hansel and Gretel would be proud of the trails of coupons you could follow," Blinky sighed.

You Letter Carriers Were Exactly Right All Along!

I was speaking with PMG Potter recently, and he said, yes, carriers were right about this DPS mess. What a disaster!

Sylvester Stallone

We screwed up by getting rid of half of your cases. Why? Because we're going to let you case DPS now. Man! Guess we'll have to buy a bunch of new cases. Well, live and learn. And as for this MSP jazz, well, let's just forget about that too. Stupid scanners are more trouble than they're worth. And while we're at it, morale was better when we had 701, so let's go ahead and reinstate that as well. What were we thinking when we got rid of that great policy? By the way, Mr. Potter tells me there'll be an early out for carriers with 15 years and are age 35 or better. There'll be a full pension plus a one year's pay separation bonus. Oh, and one last thing--April Fool!
